The Belle of West Baden.

BOB WIGGINS ATTENDS THE BALL.

A NOVEL INCIDENT.

(Special Communication to the Journal.)

WEST BADEN SPRINGS, Aug. 1.

After the middle of last week a rumor reached Posey County that a famous brandy-and-watering place in the rural shades of Indiana, known to the fashionable world as West Baden Springs, was unprecedented, and that a grand ball was on the tapis for the following Saturday night.

I had further seen it stated in the newspapers that there were several scores of marriageable young ladies in attendance whose mammae were suffering for such a thing.

"I see plainly, my dear Wiggins, that in the pursuit of knowledge under a species of difficulty which I am utterly unable to overcome. But do you observe that aristocratic-looking old gent, with the gold-headed cane and the tortoise-shell spectacles, sitting at the window opposite? Well, Wig' (the Judge sometimes calls me Wig for short) 'I am told that he is a citizen of Brown county, where you live, and he is a heavy dealer in hoop-poles and tan-bark for the production of which his farm is celebrated throughout the State. I presume he can readily furnish you the desired information."

Now upon this street is the palace of Madame Juno, the goddess of all the thoroughfares. She is the cynosure of all eyes. The newshyrs try to sell her the Journal a hundred times a day, so they may get an excuse to go and look at her. The bootblacks would give half their earnings for the privilege of polishing her undergarments. Not that the Madame lacks polish. She is all saucy except what is dignity. Her face is the acme of concentrated respectability. Her ample form is most exquisitely rounded. She is, to be sure, exceedingly substantial, both actually and figuratively. And she sells scrub brushes.

The Captain had never seen her. The current rises:

"Good evening, Madame."

[Aside: "What a magnificent woman!"]

[Juno, advancing, courtesying profoundly: "Good evening, sir." [Aside: "Pretty good looking!"]

[Juno: "It is rather warm this evening."

[Juno: "By Jove! she's a beauty!"

[Juno: "Yes, sir. Can I sell you anything to-day?" [Aside: "I wonder how much he's worth?"]

[Juno: "Yes, Madame, if you please."

[Juno: "With all my heart." [The Captain starts and looks guilty. "What shall I show you?" [Aside: "I do believe he's a trick!"]

[Juno: "What the devil did I come after?" Aloud: "Thank you, I believe I will look at—"

[Juno: "I do believe I forgot to brush my hat!"

[Juno: "What did you say, sir?"

[Juno: "I look like a whiff of wind!"

[Juno: "I look like a whiff of wind!"

[Juno: "I look like a whiff of wind!"

[Juno: "I look like a whiff of wind!"

[Juno: "I look like a whiff of wind!"

[Juno: "I look like a whiff of wind!"
